Thanks David saw this

The key part of this is

In one case a farmer is in line to receive £1m over the next 20 years after installing a new heating system for an empty shed, an anonymous letter sent to Stormont claimed.

Large factories in Northern Ireland are also allegedly on course to pocket £1.5m over the same period for running incentivised biomass boilers all year round in premises that previously were not heated.

My take on this is that “responsible use of heat” is OK so we with Broilers always used LPG and the record shows c400,000 kWh per annum per house is a easily defensible – this is what I have been preaching at all meetings.

Interesting how it all develops

David
