Plan to Grow New Growers

We (Moy Park) are working with a significant number of new growers to establish 2 house Broiler Farms on their property. The general cost for these are £620K and they are funded generally by bank borrowing secured against land and the new installation.

The basic package includes Hot Water heating (older systems – and that would be most of the existing growers) had Gas Brooders and to utilise Biomass you need Hot Water Heating

The package does not include Biomass Boilers but fitting this option to the house is easy due to the Hot Water Heating System being installed.

My proposal is that we would source a containerised Boiler house containing 2 * 99KW boilers, pipework, hot water well tank and fuel storage/handling. This unit (say the size of a 20' shipping container) would be set on site and flexible insulated hot water supply and return established to the Poultry set up.

Broiler houses suit biomass heating – it has a proven and attractive payback by way of savings of wood fuel over gas coupled with the RHI payment at 6.1p Kw guaranteed for 20 years

For a brief estimate capital cost as above £65K payback RHI and fuel savings £20K pa

Moy Park has a very low level of failure across our 400 farm base. However that said the contract with the lease company and the grower would allow the lease company free access to the site to recover the container in the event of non-payment.

The existing set up includes gas back up do in this event removal of the Biomass unit would not be hindered by animal welfare concerns etc.

The unit itself is self-contained and would have an immediate resale value and the graduated re purchase guarantee would also be an option.

Brian, David,

Have you any information on the technical spec of biomass boilers - I need it to forward to lombard to assess their appetite to fund under asset finance.

Can you email it to me.

Thanks, cormac.
