HEATING EMPTY SHED 'TO LAND FARMER -#1M OF PUBLIC MONEY'
By David Young, Press Association
A farmer is allegedly in line to receive #1 million of public money over the next 20 years for heating an empty shed due to a Stormont failure to control a renewable energy scheme, auditors have revealed.
The claim of a burning-ash-for-cash racket was made by a whistleblower and outlined in a damning Northern Ireland Audit Office report on the running of the Renewable Heat Incentive (RHI) scheme.
Large factories in Northern Ireland are also allegedly on course to pocket
