Subject: OUR CLIENT: JONATHAN BELL

Dear Madam

We refer to your letter of 1st inst.

We have taken our client's instructions and he confirms that there are no further emails/texts or any other communication within his possession, custody or control, either sent or received, during the period May 2015 to October 2015 relating to, or touching upon, the issue of the Northern Ireland Renewables Obligation (NIRO)

Yours faithfully,

Denis Moloney

Disclaimer re Provision of Bank Account Details.

Please note we will not contact you by email with our firm's Bank account details nor should you send an email containing your Bank account details to us (or indeed to anyone else).

Fraudsters are currently attempting to intercept emails between Solicitors and their clients or other correspondents which contain the intended receiving party's bank account details. The fraudster then inserts their own bank account details into the intercepted email. Believing that the details of the Bank account have been sent by their own Solicitors, the paying party then sends money by BACS or Telegraphic Transfer to that fraudulent account.

If an on line transaction is to be made by BACS or TT we will let you have our Bank account details by letter or by telephone.

N.B. When speaking by telephone, please ensure that the person you speak to has sufficient knowledge of your case to verify you are speaking to your Solicitors. While we are not aware of any of our firm's clients having been affected by this scam, it is sensible to put in place precautions against falling prey to such fraudsters by avoiding any disclosure of bank account details by email.
